Dear Jocelyn:

Thank you for the call. I hope you don't have too many snags with the prototype.

From my work - mostly with the more extreme cases of chronic pain - I think that any research involving the Sympathetic Nervous System is desperately needed, at the very least to lead to ways of validating conditions which too many doctors and insuring agencies dismiss as being merely subjective.

I'm enclosing a copy of an article which might be of interest to you. Perhaps at some point the pressure measurement device could be married to your own and provide yet one more measurement parameter.

Good luck,

David Arscott
